

Computer Use and Internet access policy

Violation of this agreement may result in the loss of Library privileges.

1. Viewing of certain texts and/or images in the Franklin Public Library may infringe the rights of other patrons to a public space that is free from the display of sexual content that may be construed as sexual harassment. The staff will use its discretion and reserves the right to prohibit the public display of texts and/or images even though the individual patron may not consider such images and/or texts offensive.
2. It is not permitted, acceptable, but not limited to:
 - Alter, tamper with, repair, circumvent, remove, or damage configurations, software, or hardware on library computers..
 - Use library computer or Internet access for illegal, fraudulent, harmful, obscene, threatening, harassing or abusive purposes.
 - Send any viruses or harmful codes to any third party.
 - Attempt to or break into or violate the security of any computer file, local or remote, database, or network, or violate another person's privacy or access, alter, steal, corrupt or destroy any data.
3. The library assumes no liability for any damage to the user's data or equipment, loss of user's privacy sustained while using library equipment or any damages, direct or indirect, arising from its connections to the Internet.
4. The library can make no guarantees with respect to the quality or conduct of the information available on the Internet. Not all the information on the Internet is accurate, current, or complete. Users are encouraged to evaluate the validity of information accessed via the Internet.
